A: Here is the answer to that question using regex. And if there is a better way to do it please let me know. I am using python 2.7. I used the re.compile() method of re. It can be found here. For example, if I want to write a regular expression that would match if a string is in the format: 112xXX2-3x11 Where x represents any character except spaces. I would write # A regular expression that would be true if a string is in the following format: # 112xXX2-3x11 # where x represents any character except spaces # 1 - an integer # 2-3x - a character sequence as given in the question # 11 - an integer. regex = re.compile('([1-9]|11)\D{0,2}(\S+){0,2}([1-9]|11)') This would match the case where an integer is followed by a dash then any number of non-spaces followed by another integer and any number of non-spaces. And now, to do the matching for the case of the regular expression in the question # At this point, we have a good idea of the string's format. # Now we will match a string that is true to our format. matches = regex.search(string) print(matches) So, as a demonstration, I wrote a function to check this for you. Note that for this type of problem you should always write a unit test. Even if the solution "works" it will probably not work correctly. And debugging with a non-unit test will be an exercise in futility. def matchPG2000Values(string): regex = re.compile('[1-9][11]D{0,2}(S+){0,2}([1-9][11])') matches = regex.search(string) if matches: 648931e174

"This is a guy who wants to be treated like a potential ally," Trump Jr. said. "He's been saying that for a long time, and for the world to sit there and say that he's not honorable is really disappointing." Watch the clip above.

So, in order to know for sure, I took it out of the pocket and in the flash of a camera, we saw this: That's right, a $1.50 bottle of wine made in the wine capital of the world. D'oh!
