Moreover, developers can exclude individual strings from the translation. The tool is very easy-to-use, allowing users to take advantage of its capabilities even if they do not possess advanced computer skills. The tool also allows for translators to view Windows forms and user controls while the translation operation is in progress. TranSolution allows translators to modify the size or location of the form's controls in order to tailor them for various string sizes. However, the programmer has to provide permission for this operation when creating the translation file. The tool comes with a series of safety options, allowing users to enforce composite formatting items into all strings that have been translated. This release introduces a new feature, a kind of translation report, that allows a quick and easy reporting of all of the translations, errors, etc, done by the translator in the solution. The report can be generated by right-clicking on any of the text fields and selecting the Translate report... option from the menu. The report can also be generated upon opening the TranslateOutgoingIncoming dialogs. It can be generated not only with this addin, but also with any other addin, such as custom dictionaries or uctransform. Of course, the report will only show information about the text fields in which the translation has been made, but can be saved in many different formats, including text files and Excel. One of the most prominent improvements introduced with this version is the fact that it does not require any Visual Studio installation. The addin has been ported to be compatible with Visual Studio 2010, so the functionality provided can be used without any installation. Additionally, if the project chosen by the user has been exported into a Microsoft translator, a so-called "translator pool" is provided, allowing developers to perform Translation with a single click using the Translator API. Besides that, it is possible to retrieve all the available translations for a text field in a project, thus allowing for the creation of a custom dictionary, allowing the selection of specific strings for translation or managing strings generated in specific languages. If the solution does not contain a Microsoft translator or if the translator pool is not available, b7e8fdf5c8
