Q: How to pass multiple parameters to a function I am trying to make a function that takes multiple parameters and stores them in separate variables. For example: #define NUM 5 void function(int a[][NUM], int b[NUM]){ ... } int main(int argc, char argv){ ... function(int argv[][5], int argv[5]){ ... } ... } Basically I want to be able to have two arrays of ints and both of them passed as arguments to the function and stored in separate variables. And his strategy of making an early, forceful trip to Tampa to introduce Romney to the world and to set his own agenda as Romney's son, Mitt Junior, begins to campaign for him was an effective one. But when the Ryan campaign launched its strategy, the assumption was that Romney's selection of Ryan would be a surprise. That assumption was based on clear signals from Romney that he's planning to
