"They are hoping that you`ll figure it out yourself and then they can charge more for repairs..." 0 0 Tweet You can look on newegg.com and Google it to see if you can find a reconditioned mother board. They are hoping that you`ll figure it out yourself and then they can charge more for repairs. If you don`t get that board, you can buy a reconditioned version from Newegg.com or Geeksystems.com for around $30-$50 and have a reasonable chance of a good board. If you do get the board and its still corrupt (which happens very often),
